Match day parking ban is unfair on club and fans

ALL the recent hullabaloo over parking outside Adams Park, has emphasised again that whatever we believe, or whoever we support, we do have to live together.

The proposed blanket waiting restrictions around Sands on a match day were clearly targeted at Wycombe Wanderers Football Club, rather than for the benefit of Sands residents.

All the Sands residents who wrote to the club were against the proposed restrictions, as it imposed on their civil liberties. Many do not attend matches, but simply wanted to park outside their own house when they wanted to. I can identify with this having been a resident of Maxwell Road, Beaconsfield for over six years. Buckinghamshire County Council recently allowed Sainsbury's to build a superstore in Maxwell Road, without imposing waiting restrictions in a road which also contains the Curzon Centre, St Mary's Primary and Middle Schools and Fifth Avenue Restaurant and Pub. Sainsbury's and these other public facilities could not function practically or economically without the unrestricted on-street parking available in Maxwell Road and surrounding area.

Why can someone park outside houses in Maxwell Road 365 days a year, when the county council propose to prevent Wycombe Wanderers' supporters parking in large areas of Sands only 30 times a year for two

by Mark Austin
sales and marketing manager

hours? It seems wrong that they do not restrict commercial companies, but instead target non-profit making community facilities like Adams Park.

There is a minority of Sands residents who literally seem to hate Wycombe Wanderers. All they want is to see the club move, and become someone else's problem (seems a tad selfish and uncaring towards one's fellow man). I know the club wants good relations with all its neighbours, recognising the need for toleration and consideration. In fact, the club has an open invitation to all its neighbours to propose ways of improving our lives together in Sands, as ideally the club wants to be a community facility that represents and serves the whole locality.

Wycombe Wanderers welcomes any constructive solutions to the parking problems that are a) workable and b) economically viable.

I do feel sorry for a few bitter people in Sands who can not accept that the club is here to stay. They seem to spend their whole lives writing negative letters and stirring up resentment, in the hope that their minority views will be seen as those of the majority.

All they are doing is ruining their own lives and causing extra heartache for many of their neighbours, who they claim to represent and care for. Surely we should all (i.e. Buckinghamshire County Council, Wycombe District Council, Thames Valley Police, Sands residents, factory owners and Wycombe Wanderers F.C. etc.) sit down together and work out a long-term workable solution to the parking in the whole area on match days? If we are ever promoted to the First Division or Premier League, this will be essential. I want everybody to enjoy life, so please let's accept each other as we are and where we are and get on enjoying this God given life we have been given, its far too precious to allow intolerance to spoil it!

Traffic chaos: Scenes like this may become a more familiar sight

Terry's glad to be back

By Terry Evans

WHILST the majority of the players relaxed after the final at Wembley I was undergoing extensive work on my damaged knee. It was with some apprehension that I attended an appointment with the surgeon so he could carry out a full examination.

Mr Channon gave me a clean bill of health and stated that the knee was now strong enough for me to start full training.

This lifted a great weight off my shoulders and since then I have managed to fully build up all the muscles which wasted through the lack of training and from when the plaster was on my leg.

Even though the hard work was inevitable, without the expertise of Mr Channon and his staff, together with the efforts of the club physio Dave Jones, my career could already be over, so I owe a great deal of thanks to these people.

Hopefully Mr Channon will come and see the Wanderers play, so I can thank him properly.

Paul Hyde has recently had a successful hernia operation. I would not want to wish an injury on any other player but it is quite lonely training on your own so I was thankful that both Paul and Tim Langford have been working at the club with me to ensure that they are also fit in plenty of time for the new season.

I, like many people, have watched the majority of the games in what has been the best World Cup I can remember. I have not been too impressed with the quality of goal keeping - not least poor Pat Bonner - but it does add to the excitement.

Normally the opening games are dire with no team wanting to lose and instead happy to settle for a draw. The decision to award three points for a win has proved excellent; it has made teams go out and attack rather than just sitting back and defending with the hope of catching the opposition on the counter.

FIFA have rightly been criticised for making referees show too many yellow cards, some of the officials have given them out for ridiculous reasons. But stopping trainers coming onto the pitch has, in my view, minimised the play-acting and time-wasting which I believe started on the Continent and now finds itself in our game.

I really think that the stretcher carts coming on to carry players off was all a bit too much but, as the tournament progressed, it happened less and less, possibly because the referees have insisted on this and teams did not want to be reduced to ten men until a stop in play allowed the player to come back onto the pitch.

I cringe when I see the likes of Klinsmann, Maradona and many others diving when they have not been touched at all. They can have no sense of morals after seeing replays of themselves which have subsequently resulted in a penalty, a fellow professional being booked and sometimes even sent off for doing absolutely nothing.

I was brought up to believe that football is a man's game for which you can play very hard, but fair. In all my time playing I can honestly say that I have never kicked an injury. If you need to resort to constant play acting to propel yourself to a higher level, I'm sorry, but I won't be playing in Europe.

Stopping trainers coming onto the pitch has helped the game keep going and proved far more entertaining without all the stoppages. The likes of myself can always do with a breather but in most of our games the trainers rarely come on anyway.

Have you noticed how many head injuries occur in the English game as opposed to those in the World Cup? This is possibly because of the speed of our game and the commitment British teams

Stopping trainers coming onto the pitch has helped keep the game going and proved entertaining show.

You can believe me when I say that no player ever intends to clash heads with a fellow professional as it really can hurt but, even so, the pain still does not go away if you roll around the grass clutching your head.

The new FIFA directive will surely soon result in a genuinely hurt player not receiving fast attention from a trainer. If it is clear that somebody has a serious injury especially to the head, they should immediately call on the trainer without the permission of the referee.

A yellow card for a physio is nothing in comparison to a player who has stopped breathing. I believe that if you explain to the referee why you did this whilst the player is still receiving attention he will fully understand your action even if it later becomes clear that you were wrong.

When I was younger and less experienced I did often give the man in the middle some stick which resulted in plenty of bookings and a few sending offs but players and fans need to understand that the ref is also looking to have a good game, if you treat him fair and take time to have a chat you are more likely to gain a little bit more respect from him.

I could not believe that the Columbian defender was killed on his return home, did his countrymen really think that he scored an own goal on purpose? No player or even a referee ever steps onto the field with the intention of having a bad game, these things just sometimes happen. If a player is to be killed every time he makes a mistake, we would not have to worry about contracts because we would not live long enough to see them out!

As mentioned in a previous article I was hoping to take a further coaching course this summer but getting myself fully fit was far more important so this will have to wait until next year.

I have also kept myself quite busy carrying out other functions in Wycombe including a charity event at the airfield, golf tournaments and presentations, together with a visit to elevenSEVENTY radio.

If you would like to contact me personally regarding anything, please feel free to write to me at the club marking the letter for my attention.

Day out is a soaring success

An invitation to help thousands of children have a day to remember proved too good to miss. Wanderers' players, including Simon Garner who drove all the way from Blackburn, made sure it was a day the youngsters would never forget. By Steve Hayes

IN April, Moyra Chandler wrote to Terry Evans regarding a charity event at Wycombe Air Park on June 27. Terry passed the details onto myself as I coordinate all of his non-playing activities.

I later discovered that the day was to be organised by Skyline Helicopters to give as many handicapped and sick children the chance of a short flight.

Noel Edmonds and Mr Blobby were to be present, with many other stands and events including eleven-SEVENTY radio.

As the day came nearer, I spoke to Linda Tilbury, the administrator for the Children's Farnborough. She explained that they were expecting some 4,000 kids together with a further 20,000 helpers and families them as I could, some were on holiday enjoying a well-earned rest but the majority of the first team confirmed that they would attend without any hesitation.

On Sunday 26 I met Linda to discuss what she wanted the players to do. It became clear that to organise an event of this size was a mammoth task and many people had worked tirelessly for weeks leading up to the big day to make it as enjoyable as possible.

All the helicopter and microlight flight were to be free, together with the food and drink which was supplied by local companies. Without any arm twisting, Mark Austin also supplied hundreds of Wanderers caps, together with some other merchandise to hand out to the children.

It was arranged to meet at the club so that we could all arrive together. The players present were Terry Evans, Glyn Creaser, Paul Hyde, Jason Cousins, Dave Carroll, Steve Guppy, Keith Ryan and Simon Garner. Many of them had driven a very long way to be at the event, it was very much appreciated that Keith Scott and Jim Melvin also found time to join us.

It was not long before all the merchandise had been handed out as the players were recognised soon after parking. The lads proceeded to walk round speaking to fans, having their photographs taken and signing autographs.

Although Mr Blobby was easily the most popular person, it was clear the children were very pleased to see the players to come to the airfield for the biggest charity event ever to be held in Wycombe.

She asked if I could arrange for as many of the players as possible to come and spend some time with the children to make their day even better.

I proceeded to contact as many of

Even though Mr Blobby was easily the most popular person it was clear that the children were pleased to see the players which added to their excitement.

In total some 4,870 children attended, with some 4,500 of them experiencing a flight. They consumed 4,000 hamburgers, 6,000 portions of chips, 6,000 pieces of fruit, drank 21,000 soft drinks and 10,000 cups of tea and coffee.

This was together with untold portions of popcorn and, of course, thousands of ice lollies on what was a very hot day. They all left the event with a goodie bag full of sweets and cakes.

On Linda's behalf I would like to thank all the players who came together with Jim Melvin and the club for supplying the merchandise.

They are looking to repeat the event next year. Hopefully Wycombe Wanderers' players will again be able to attend to assist in giving these children another fantastic day out.

Tiddlywinks champ has me hanging on for result

Dear Editor,

IN case anyone is interested, I thought I would take advantage of a rare spare moment to detail you on the second half of my endeavours to follow the Wanderers from afar. As some of you will remember, I am an eighteen-year-old volunteer English teacher in Santiago, the smog ridden capital of Chile in South America.

I'll take up the story where I left off.

It was mid-February, we were in the top three heading for Wembley in the Autoglass Trophy and I was just embarking on the second half of my teaching career.

The first half had involved smiling a lot whilst groups of adolescents swore at me in a foreign language I didn't understand; the second half involved the very same adolescents evolving into fluent speakers of the English language by virtue of my seemingly limitless teaching skills and basic grasp of the previously incomprehensible native tongue.

Whilst at home, Wycombe were trudging through bleary mid-season of rain and cold and cold and cold and rain, here in the sun my students were the beneficiaries of some of the most inspired English teaching since Robin Williams in Good Morning Vietnam. The live global screening of the Arsenal-Palma Cup Winners Cup Final - on a Wednesday afternoon provided one class with the opportunity to learn such useful phrases as "boring, boring".

Arsenal and prizes were awarded for the fastest correct pronunciation of the word "donkey" on the sighting of either Tony Adams or Alan Smith.

As the English season progressed 12,000 miles away, it seemed from afar that the Blues were being drawn towards their destiny of a play-off berth. Although I still listened to the world service every Saturday, it was as though over here, I had no control - not even able to shout abuse at referees and you can appreciate how frustrating that is - and that a higher power was drawing us away from automatic promotion. Before the season reached its close, I was fortunate enough to be in the crowd for the Chile-Argentina pre-World Cup friendly to see Diego Maradona display his not inconsiderable skills in front of 60,000 fans, including a six-strong British contingent who made sure he didn't forget his recently-acquired bulk.

However, of course, after the disappointment of the Crewe and Preston matches and the joy of both play-off victories over Carlisle games it all came down to Saturday May 28 and Wembley again. As on each of our previous Wembley appearances I had my hair cut on the morning of the match and at 7.30 our time, 23.20 hours GMT, I settled down in front of the trusty radio. As the familiar tones of Jazz for the Asking died away at 7.45pm, have to admit to being somewhat tetchy and nervous. This though, does not mean that I ever once doubted the outcome - in a way I'm quite glad I wasn't in the stadium as the weight of my expectation would probably have weighed down the team somewhat. However, it was the big match so I suppose I had to feel nervy and uncomfortable.

I then sat through the tennis, endured the dire rugby, jumped up and down with frustration during the ice-skating news, the news of the retirement of a famous Polish tiddlywink champion until, at last, after what seemed like ages, the result. The score, nothing more, if I'd sneezed I would have missed it. But, well, I punched the air in delight, put my coat on and went out for a beer.

Easily really.

On matchdays at Wycombe Wanderers we have sold Golden Goal tickets, draw tickets for prizes and tickets for penalty competitions, but now comes the best matchday ticket that we have ever promoted, its called

THE WANDERERS MATCHDAY 50/50 DRAW

We have dropped the Golden Goal tickets and raffle penalty tickets to sell this draw ticket exclusively on matchdays!

It's called the 50/50 draw because exactly 50% of the gross takings will be won by one lucky winner at every home match.

The tickets are counterfoiled, each individually numbered (no writing down name & address), the counterfoil section of your ticket/s will be placed in the drum and the draw made on the pitch at half-time. The winning number will be announced over the public address system and the ticket holder will then claim their cash prize from the commercial office after the final whistle!

Tickets are only 50 pence each and available from our sellers at the turnstiles and around the ground.

How much will the prize money be? That depends entirely upon you! The more tickets you buy, the higher the prize money will be! Notts County had similar home attendances to us last season, their matchday winners were taking home £750!

So support the Wanderers matchday 50/50 draw, the first one will be at the Cambridge United match on August 13th.

You could be one of our Lucky Winners!

THE BLUES NEWS

Future is looking rosy for Blues

Ardent Blues' supporter Stephen Lee ponders the future prospects of Wycombe Wanderers as they prepare for Division II

WITH just a few short weeks until the next chapter of the Wycombe Wanderers league story unfolds, now is perhaps the time not to reflect on glory, as that has been done, but to look ahead, as we enter our second new division in as many seasons.

Most of the current army of Blues' fans only know one outcome to a season - success. So what would be judged a success this season?

To answer that, first let us consider the set up in Division Two. It is my understanding that next season the league is streamlining itself to even up the divisions.

That means from 24 clubs, one goes up automatically, with another via the play-offs. At the wrong end, five teams will be relegated instead of the usual four. So competition for both the prizes and demotions will be fierce.

Now let us consider the opposi-

We will see the beginning of new rivalries to replace Slough, Kettering and Colchester tion. The biggest club in the division is unquestionably Birmingham City, Barry Fry's all-blue army! They must start as favourites to win the league, if for no other reason than the size of their support.

Other big clubs include Plymouth Argyle (considered sleeping giants!) Cardiff (another comatose giant), and Oxford (!). Reasonably successful clubs from last season were Stockport, York, Bradford, Bristol Rovers and Hull.

So if that's the promotion issues settled, where does that leave us? Every fixture looks tough on paper, especially the three local derbies against Oxford, Brentford and Leyton Orient.

I'm sure these matches will see the beginning of new rivalries to replace the likes of Slough, Kettering and Colchester. What a pity that Reading escaped our clutches this time!

Without any previous experience of the second division, we could draw great heart from studying our cup form against these sides.

Do you remember our cup match against Peterborough in our first season at Adams Park? They were on the way up then, now we meet them on an equal footing. On the other hand, cup form could be very misleading, but at least we are aware of some of the clubs involved.

Previously success has meant promotions or Wembley appearances. Now I would say to finish somewhere in mid-table would be perfect. That dreaded word 'consolidation' springs to mind.

Without doubt we are now in a division to match our support and facilities. Even last season our home and away support was far greater than most of our rivals. In Division Two, I expect our away support to hold its own, but at home we are restricted by the size of Adams Park and the short-sighted attitude of the local council towards parking.

Consolidation can never be the policy of an ambitious club like ours, I'm suggesting the yardstick for success should be lowered. Then maybe if we reach the play-offs again, we'll treat it as a remarkable bonus, rather than compensation for not going up automatically.

Blue Army goes barmy: But will Wanderers' fans have plenty to cheer about this season?

Our role model should perhaps be Norwich. They are a nice town club, hence the comparison to us

Football pundits believe there is very little difference between the two basement divisions, the real leap is from the second to the first.

Let's just dream for a moment. Next season we beat Birmingham City at Wembley in front of a capacity crowd (split 50/50 between the real Blue Army and Brummies) to win promotion again via the play-offs. What would that mean to the leafy Buckinghamshire town of High Wycombe?

Firstly, we would fall under the auspices of the Taylor Report for Premier and First Division clubs. That means we require an all-seater stadium. So unless we expand the ground our capacity would be terribly low for the visits of Sunderland, Portsmouth, West Bromwich and the relegated Premier Club Tottenham Hotspur!

Next we could be eligible for exemption to the second round of the League Cup and vitally, third round of the F A Cup! Just think our meeting with Norwich in 1993/94 was only the third time in 110 years we had reached that stage. Now we automatically qualify alongside the big clubs!

Finally, media exposure of the club would intensify beyond belief.

With ITV frequently labelling our live games from Adams Park as the new Wimbledon battling against the established order to reach the promised land - a local derby against Wimbledon in the Premier League.

In the real world what I've written is unrealistic, but it could happen! For some like myself, who ten years ago was watching a very different club play on the hillside called Loakes Park, quite happy to be labelled the sleeping giants of the Isthmian League, just the thought of going to Birmingham City for a league game watched by over 20,000 fans is quite extraordinary.

There I go reflecting in our success again. So to the future, could Buckinghamshire support a First Division Club?

We've gone from crowds of 700 to over 5,000 in five years. If the same growth rate continues by the end of the century we'll be playing in front of 40,000-plus crowds! Though the Bucks Free Press Stand might be a little full!

It has been said that our role model should be Norwich not Wimbledon. They are a nice town club, hence the comparison to us. It will take years, generations even, for our support base to widen enough to really establish ourselves amongst the footballing elite.

Support growth up to now has mainly been down to success on the field. With only two more divisions left to ascend, we can't rely solely on attracting more fans to a winning team.

Long-term growth will be achieved by community involvement, encouraging new generations to develop pride in their league club.

You could accuse me of bias, but I believe this club understands completely that their supporters are the most vital ingredient to the club's future. For instance, at a time when costs are set to increase dramatically due to our higher status, admission prices have risen by only 50p to £6.50. I hope this gesture is rewarded with another leap in attendance figures.
